ABSTRACT

Presented in chart form are summary data on the states' present policies regarding identification, assessment, and placement of handicapped children in special education programs as of June 1, 1973. Identified are trends toward increased procedures of due process to govern placement changes, more flexible programing patterns, classification systems based on learning needs, and decreased dependence on standardized tests. Initial identification of handicapped children is seen to be presently accomplished through three procedures -- census, screening, and referral. Information on assessment and placement is given by handicapping conditions under the following four categories: personnel involved in the evaluation (whether a psychologist is required), the types of data utilized in making the placement (such as school history and testing), the placement process (often involving a placement committee, parental consent, and an appeal process), and placement review procedures. Information is given for the following handicapping conditions: blind, deaf, emotionally disturbed, gifted and talented, hard of hearing, homebound and hospitalized, learning disabled, mentally handicapped, (custodial, educable, and trainable), multiply handicapped, physically handicapped, and speech handicapped. information needs of persons or agencies involved in or considering change, The Council for Exceptional Children through a in all branches -- executive, judicial, and legislative. Recognizing government's crucial role in the expansion process and the grant from the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped, U.S. Office of Education established the State-Federal Information awareness that the degree and quality of this expansion is heavily dependent on the activities of government at all levels and As the opportunities for handicapped children to receive an education expand in the United States, there is an increasing Clearinghouse for Exceptional Children (SFICEC) to provide this information.

The purpose of SFICEC is to identify, acquire, process, selectively retrieve, and disseminate information pertaining to government and the education of handicapped children. In carrying out this charge, SFICEC has developed a computer-based information system for the efficient and accurate retrieval of information.

utilize information from the law, administrative literature, attorney general's opinions and actual litigation. Other products To disseminate this information, SFICEC develops and distributes information products with material drawn from its data base. The products focus on specific areas pertaining to government and the education of handicapped children and discuss key issues and areas of concern to educators, parents, and public policy makers. In addition, SFICEC is also prepared to conduct searches to answer individual specific information requests.

Acknowledgement must be given to Beverly Wetzel, Nancy Selzer and Nancy Bolick of the State-Federal Information Clearinghouse for Exceptional Children staff for the capable manner in which they contributed to the writing, typing, proofreading and in fact the entire production of this document.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

As a result of the turmoil presently occurring relating to the identification, assessment and placement of all handicapped children in appropriate education programs, the following behavior changes for the public schools

- Procedures of due process will be used to govern changes in the educational placement of children with any special needs. These procedures will be carried to hearings challenging the recommendations of the public school with increasing frequency for a short time.
- In response to the challenges mentioned above, and due process itself, the public schools will create more flexible programming patterns reflecting efforts to better meet the individual needs of children. special education contract in one form or another will be adopted by the public schools. જં
 - Classification systems will be based upon specific learning needs of children rather than psychological, medical or any other descriptive systems. က
- The present level of dependence upon standardized tests will decline and will be followed by more extensive use of information collected from home, school, and community. New tests more adequately reflecting various culture norms and learning styles will be developed and used, but with constraints learned as a result of the present overuse of tests.

assessment, and placement of handicapped children into special education programs. Because of the great amount summary information only. Persons interested in more specific data from a particular state should write to of material in the area, the State-Federal Information Clearinghouse for Exceptional Children has presented The following document contains summary data of the states' present policies regarding identification, the State-Federal Information Clearinghouse for Exceptional Children.

Although the material is as current as possible, the constant updating and revisions of both law and regulations may render some of the material out-of-date.

DENTIFICATION

Initial identification of handicapped children is presently done through three procedures--census, screening, and referral. These procedures are intended to serve the purpose of locating children who may need assessment prior to receiving special education services.

qualify as exceptional children. State institutions, hospitals, and detention facilities must check their records annually one of those states use a combination of the regular school census plus a special census for the handicapped which may of census may be done annually, every two years, every four years, or any other time as designated by law. Twentyinclude a variety of methods. In Alabama a special census is conducted by school boards to locate children who might conduct a school census for all children which requires specifically that handicapped children be located. This type Two types of census procedures are generally utilized. One is the regular school census. Thirty-four states to locate children needing special education services.

send to the county superintendent a list of all blind children in the county. This list, after being forwarded to the state county superintendent the name and any other required information on all children whose conditions appear to require all children with physical disabilities which prevent their attendance at school or greatly impede their progress must be sent by the county superintendents to the state superintendent who then forwards the list to the crippled children's In Florida the special census for the handicapped requires that field workers of the crippled children's commissuperintendent, is forwarded to the superintendent of the Florida school for the deaf and blind. Finally, listings of special education services. Further, at the beginning of each school year the principals of the county schools must sion, the state board of health, and the state board of welfare review their case records annually and report to the commission or any other agency serving physically handicapped children.

In addition, more than half the states have some form of screening for viston, hearing, and/or physical handicaps. in the first, third, fifth, seventh, and ninth grades. The school nurse, classroom teacher, and school principal are the persons usually given the responsibility of conducting such efforts. Other types of screening include assessing This type of screening is usually conducted on a regular basis, such as, every four years or of all children annually reading skills of first and second grade children in California and contagious diseases in Arkansas.

The third way in which handicapped children are identified is through the use of referrals by parents, teachers, or other personnel in the school including the principal, doctors and other medical personnel, agencies such as the department of mental health or department of welfare, or community organizations. A new law in Arkansas, for example, requires that the school have tested and examined every child that a parent or guardian believes to be handicapped regardless of the opinion of school authorities. ASSESSMENT AND FLACEMENT

ಡ and placed into special education programs. Parent participation, due process procedures, and the utilization of Recent litigation and legislation have begun to require changes in the way handicapped children are evaluated broader range of data regarding the child's placement are among some of the innovations being implemented In order to assess what effect this is having on the development of law and regulations, SFICEC has divided state law and regulations into four categories encompassing: 1' the personnel involved in the evaluation; 2' the types of data utilized in making the placement; 3) the placement process; and 4) placement review procedures.

lowa, "appropriate professional examiners" are required. More than half the states now also require un educational assessment prior to placement. The use of physicians in the diagnostic process occurs in almost 75% of the states. In most states a psychologist is used in the evaluation process regardless of the child's handicap. In Alabama, prior to placement in a special program. In some states no specific types of personnel are specified but instead in for example, all handicapped children other than the speech handicapped must receive a psychological evaluation More than ten states allow for the use of a psychiatrist if it is felt necessary by school officials.

and in some cases, family interviews. In Massacushetts*, "no results of standardized or local tests of ability, aptidiagnosis, or evaluation. Such tests must be approved by the department in accordance with regulations of the board making placement decisions. Some of this data includes the child's school and medical history, home environment, tude, attitude, affect: achievement, or aspiration may be used exclusively in the selection of children for referral, Approximately 20 states are now sing more comprehensive data in addition to more traditional test scores in to assure that they are as free as possible from cultural and linguistic bias, or wherever necessary, separately evaluated with reference to the linguistic and cultural group to which the child belongs."

child needs special education, the school committee (board of education) must notify the parent or guardian of the child. The written notice must be in the primary language of the home and provide notice of the referral, the evaluation proregulations adopted jointly by the education, mental health, and public health departments. If a child with special learning needs requires medical or psychological treatment as part of the special education programs or his parent or guardian requires social services related to the child's special needs, such treatment and services or both will be made available in accordance with joint regulations of the departments of education, mental health, public health, and public welfare in connection with the child's special education program.

due process rights of handicapped children and their parents in the placement process. Only a minimal number of states have initiated procedures similar to these. In Pennsylvania as a result of a court decision, procedures were mandated The placement procedures delineated previously for Massachusetts adhere to recent court decisions regarding the permission prior to evaluation. In Georgia for example parental permission for individual psycho-educational testing for the mentally retarded but not for other handicapped children. Recent laws in Tennessee and Connecticut establish due process placement procedures for all handicapped children. Less than 20 percent of the states require parental is considered important, but the regulations indicate that legally the school system already has this perogative (if the testing is scheduled during the regular school day) they also indicate however that it is desirable to have the parents' agreement and support.

and (3) an indication of the future development of the child. Placement or non-placement of a child may not be promised to parents since these decisions are the perogative of the local school system and also depend on other factors such as states may be provided if requested by parents. In Georgia if the parents desire a conference, the psycho-educational For such testing most states also do not require parental consent for placement. Parental conferences in some evaluator is expected to give parents three types of information: (1) an indication of the elements of the examination and their significance; (2) an interpretation of the child's mental age, and if retardation is present, its meaning; class enrollment, available transportation, etc.

a few states some non-school personnel are included on the placement committee. In South Carolina for example the placement committee may include the superintendent, principal, supervisor of special education, regular homeroom Almost 60 percent of the states have placement committees that assist in making placement determinations. In teacher, psychiatrist, special education teacher, school counselor, school nurse, psychologist, physician, social worker and other personnel.

The power of placement committees varies widely. In some cases they make the final determination; in others they may only recommend as in South Carolina where the committee makes recommendations to the local school administrator regarding placement.

The re-evaluation of children is required in approximately 30 percent of the states. In Louisiana children are re-evaluated only if they are not progressing in the program. In Minnesota, Texas, and Washington, for example, annual reviews are required. Michigan requires an annual review but if a child's handicap is termed "chronic," a written affirmation of the continued presence of the handicap is the only review required. In Massachusetts, a child must be re-examined within ten months of the initial placement and annually thereafter.
